Marc E. Willis – Biographical Sketch

Marc Willis currently serves as Chief Executive Officer of The Soulsville Foundation, the nonprofit parent company that operates the Stax Museum of American Soul Music, Stax Music Academy, and The Soulsville Charter School. In this capacity, he is able to lend his entrepreneurial spirit to his commitment to mentoring youth.

Before becoming CEO of the organization, Marc was the first Director of the Stax Music Academy, involved in every process from its design to overseeing full-time operations for the 27,000 square-foot learning center. The music academy provides music education and unique performance opportunities for potentially at-risk children. During his 3 years as Director, he led the academy team through the creation of new programs and operations. Marc continues to develop effective and valuable partnerships locally, nationally, and internationally that provide unique opportunities for academy students.

During his tenure as Academy Director he also led the effort and provided substantial vision in establishing The Soulsville Charter School, which began in July 2005 with 60 sixth-graders and will eventually become a 6th through 12th grade school. The school's mission is to prepare students for higher education in an academically rigorous, musically rich environment. Under his leadership, the school is establishing its overall culture of high expectations and academic success for its students along with the planned growth of adding a grade per year.

Marc became CEO in 2005 and continues to guide the vision of both educational programs, while taking responsibility for the direction and operations of the Stax Museum. The museum has seen the benefits of his leadership in the stabilization of its operations and increased attendance and retail sales revenue, both of which contribute to the scholarship programs for academy students. He has also overseen the development and creation of several changing gallery exhibitions owned by the museum, which will be leased to other museums across the nation and internationally. He currently oversees the organization's campus expansion project and community planning initiatives. This is a multi-million dollar effort that will provide additional learning spaces for students and redevelopment opportunities for the Soulsville community.

Marc's passion for music and education led him to teach undergraduate and graduate courses for the Department of Music at Indiana University/Purdue University in Indianapolis. He then turned his attention to Lemoyne-Owen College and returned to Memphis, TN to teach as an instructor and initiate a music technology program which he developed, along with leading the effort to redesign the college's Jazz studies program.

In addition to his active and varied career in the music industry as a freelance composer, songwriter, media producer and designer, and consultant, Marc also spent over four years in the corporate world in employee relations at FedEx.

Marc received his Bachelors of Music degree in Film Scoring and Music Composition from Berklee College of Music in Boston MA. He also earned two Masters Degrees from Indiana University / Purdue University in Indianapolis, one in Music Technology and the second in New Media. He currently serves on the Board of Directors for Memphis Convention and Tourist Bureau, LeMoyne-Owen College and Success for Public Charter Schools.

John Michael McCarthy

John Michael McCarthy always wanted to draw comics. Growing up on a gravel road in Mississippi provided a certain amount of isolation to make this goal a focused reality. Other interests took shape playing in bands and making films. McCarthy moved to Memphis in 1984 and attended The Memphis Academy of Art receiving his bachelors degree in 1986. At that point McCarthy's rock band had already played the first all ages show at the Antenna Club.

McCarthy pursued American's most prestigious independent comics publisher Fantagraphics Books and in 1989 co-created "Kid Anarchy" which was reviewed favorably by the Village Voice.

In 1993 McCarthy incorporated Memphis' first independent film company called Guerrilla Monster. McCarthy made six features, two shorts and several videos in a span of eight years for roughly one hundred thousand dollars and earned the moniker "Godfather of Independent Cinema" and "a protean force on the Memphis film scene" by the Memphis Flyer. His works have been screened throughout Europe (including Cannes) and McCarthy had a retrospective of his work at the Sitges International Film Festival in Spain in 2001. There McCarthy showed his "Elvis Meets The Beatles" which was written and directed by McCarthy and produced by Craig Brewer.

McCarthy has worked as a video coordinator at the Pyramid Arena directing live feed for Tiger Basketball games and was the Executive Secretary to Donnie Mitchell in the Division of Public Services and Neighborhoods from 2001 through 2003. McCarthy wrapped up his tenure for the City by working at EMA as a code dispatch operator.

McCarthy now works as a tour guide at Sun Studio while traveling to Europe showing his work, most recently at the Barbican Theatre in London where the city celebrated southern culture in a month long 2005 show called "It Came From Memphis". McCarthy traveled to Paris for another successful screening. The next big thing on the horizon is "Warbride", a big budget movie being produced by Craig Brewer and directed by McCarthy. The two filmmakers are bashing out the screenplay as you read this.

McCarthy has a wife of 18 years, Kimberly McCarthy, and two children Hanna Mildred (age 8) and John Marvel (age 3). They've lived in Cooper-Young since 1999.
